Irish train disaster on fail-safe system

An investigation into the train crash in the Irish Republic on Sunday night in which seven people were killed began last night Ten passengers were seriously hurt and another 40 are being treated in hospital.

The investigators will have to find whether the accident was caused by human error or the breakdown of a supposedly fail safe centralized signalling system, and a back-up procedure intended to prevent accidents of this kind. The accident, involving a train from Galway to Dublin and a stationary train from automatic warning system, similar to that run by British Rail, has operated for six years.

The first way. Join the Royal Navy on the University Cadetship scheme. Places are now available for young men with the potential to get to the top. If you are accepted you join the Royal Navy up to a year before university and undergo initial Officer training.

You then study for your degree. You receive £4,563 for the first year, £5,110 for the second and on promotion to Sub-Lieutenant, £5,661 for the third. A similar scheme applies to the Royal Marines. The second way. Apply for a Royal Navy Bursary.

You have to be accepted for at least a Short Career Commission in the Royal Navy, the Royal Marines or the Women's Royal Naval Service. While you are studying for your degree we pay you £ 900 a year on top of your grant.

You will be expected to get involved in naval activities during your vacations, but you don't join the Navy until after you graduate.

How to apply. To qualify for either scheme you must have a confirmed or provisional place on a UK degree course and you must graduate before your 26th birthday. You must also be a UK resident.

US agent jailed in Moscow as Belgium breaks Soviet spy ring

Tass did not name the Americans concerned, however, which is apparently a sign that Moscow does not intend to make an issue out of the case. It gave no details about Ivanov or his alleged espionage beyond saying that he had acted on instructions from the CIA. . There have been two cases this year in which American diplomats have been named as pies and declared persona non grata, but neither case was given prominence by the Soviet media, which give the im-pression that the CIA remains endlessly resourceful and remorselessly anti-Soviet, whatever the ups and downs of Soviet-American relations.

BRUSSELS: Belgium has expelled at least six East Europeans for economic espionage and uncovered a Brussels electronics firm serving as a front for Soviet technological spying, a senior Belgian official said yesterday, (Reuter reposts).

The official, who spoke on condition that he was not named, said that the discovery of the firm followed the expulsion at the weekend of one Soviet and three Romanian diplomats and an employee of the Romanian Embassy without concern that he might have diplomatic status. At least one Soviet employee of the firm had also been expelled.

The expulsions resulted from the arrest some 10 days ago of Eugene Michiels, a European trade specialist in the Belgian Foreign Ministry who has admitted selling documents to the diplomats. Mr Michiels is being held in prison.

The role of the electronics firm was discovered by security agents working on the Michiels case, but it was not clear whether there was any con-nexion between the two.

The electronics company was run and finnced by Russians but had been set under Belgian law and employed several Belgians,

Mr Leo Tindemans, the Belgian Foreign Minister, said in a weekend radio interview that diplomats had been expelled after the arrest of Mr Michiels. He declined to say how many or give their countries of origin, but the State Prosecutor's office has con-firmed the explusion of five.

Romanian Embassy spokesman denied to the Belgian press agency that any Romanians, had been expelled and said that such reports could seriously harm relations between Belgium and Romania The Soviet Embassy declined

Mauritians back Prime Minister in elections

Port Louis (Reuter) - The three-party alliance of Mr Ancerood Jugnauth, the Prime Minister, crushed former Finance Minister Paul Berenger's opposition Mauritian Militant Movement (MMM) in general elections yesterday.

Final results gave Mr Jugnauth's alliance 41 parliamentary seats against 21 for the MMM. Mr Berenger was beaten in his home district

A further eight seats may be allocated later by the country's electoral commission under a complicated "best loser" system, but this cannot change the alliance's lead.

Mr Jugnauth, in a victory statement to enthusiastic supporters said: "We must work for the good of the country and of the people to preserve democracy and build our economy."

Mr Berenger, conceding defeat, said: "The struggle continues but we respect the result of the election." The election was called just 4 months after Mr Jugnauth, a London-trained lawyer, and Mr

Berenger swept to power in an alliance of the MMM, of which they were then both members, with the now defunct Mauritian Socialist Party (PSM).

The alliance collapsed last March and Mr Berenger left the Cabinet with most MMM ministers. Mr Jugnauth stayed in power, supported by the PSM which since transformed itself into the Mauritian Socialist

The sale of monkeys for research is big business. This second of three articles follows the trail from capture

The serious monkey business

By Andrew Tyler

Non-human primates have been changing hands for 5,000 years or more. Accounts dating back to ancient Egypt show them as pets, zoo impending shortage and calling for specimens, agriculture labourers, cirincreased domestic breeding, self cus exhibits, objects of religious reliance and less waste. veneration and, increasingly in our own time, laboratory tools.

The roots of the modern biomedical relationship extend to the late nineteenth century, when a number of Russians sought cures for tuberculosis and the plague. It was in Sukhumi, by the Black Sea, that the world's first major primate centre opened in 1927, and yet by then Dr Serge Voronoff had already performed his startling rejuvenation routines that involved transplanting slivers of chimpanzee testicle (known in polite circles as "sex glands") into the scrotums of aging humans.

More sombre breakthroughs came with the beating of yellow fever in Panama, the discovery of the Rh factor in blood - thus combating the blue baby syndrome - and the West's holy war against poliomyelytis, which cost in the region of Pamillion monkey lives - and is still costing.

When the pelio programme began in the 1950s, neither North America nor Europe had anything approaching sufficient rhesus stock. It was to India they turned, and at the height of the battle three planeloads were arriving every week at London Airport, each plane packed with 1.600 monkeys.

For the majority, death came long before the laboratories required them to give up their kidneys. They were lost through absurdly reckless trapping, holding and transit operations. In while en route to New York. Hundreds more at a time perished from disease including the testing of polio vaccine. and starvation in the holds of ships. But it was not until the early 1970s, when rabies swept through Europe, that rigorous controls were finally introduced.

India had since been joined in the marketplace by several Asian and African countries. By then, as well as polio vaccine, there was a proliferation of monkey projects involving a host of Old World species including vervets and macaques. The US now had its seven regional primate centres, while Britain enjoyed a more modest programme, principally orchestrated through the Medical Research Council. Inevitably, the almost lustful im-

Little heed was paid, however, until the Indian authorities turned off the tap in 1978. Apart from their concern at a relative scarcity of a once inexhaustible bounty, they had been revolted by the American radiation and neutron bomb tests: these had not been in the contract

Bangladesh looked a likely substi-tute for supplies until she abruptly cancelled an exclusive 10-year contract with an Oregon firm called MoL Enterprises, also citing radiation experiments performed on early shipments. MoL retorted with a $15m law suit, and a larger one against a competitor it claimed had bribed Bangladeshi officials to get the deal abandoned.

Meanwhile another US competitor, Charles River, plunged into the rhesus breeding business with two privatelyowned monkey islands off Key West in Florida. Each free-range Charles River rhesus - just like the company's production-belt, caesarian delivered rodents - came guaranteed clean with a multi-digit code stamped on its chest

Monkeys are treated as local pests

Charles River offered more hope when it announced that the irreplaceable rhesus wasn't quite as irreplaceable as had been supposed; that the January 1955, 394 animals died in an relatively plentiful, widely dispersed unventilated van at London Airport cynomolgus macaque would serve as well in many key laboratory routines.

> This brought such potential macaque suppliers as Indonesia, the Philippines and Malaysia more prominently into play. African baboons were also becoming a standard laboratory tool, particularly in Britain. But the truly burgeoning trade began developing in South American (New World) primates such as the marmoset and the squirrel monkey.

The majority of laboratory-reared animals live one or a handful to a metal cage and are addressed under hot lights by scrubbed-up, white-coated operatives: this, at least, is the general picture in Britain, where the Home

"The highest mortality happens at holding stations. These local people have no regard for the monkeys. To them, they are just local pests. They are not fed well, they will squeeze six or seven into a 3ft cage, they will lift and drop the cage as if they were moving carts of stone."

Top of the US and United Kingdom import league at present is the cynomolgus macaque. This is an intelligent, social animal that has carved a niche for itself across the whole of the Asian lowlands, including Borneo and the coastal islands. In Bali it is regarded as sacred.

Cynomolgus live mostly in mangrove swamps where they swim and fish for crustaceans. Theirs is a maledominated, completely polygamous society that bands together in troops of up to 50.

Britain's major cynomolgus operator is Keith Hobbs, whose company is called Intersimian. Hobbs is a veteran monkey handler who was commissioned by the Medical Research Council in the early 1970s to take stock of Britain's primate prospects; it was Since the beginning of the year his company has been shipping cynomol-Shamrock Farms of Sussex. Shamrock which received a degree of publicity is, in fact, Britain's largest importer after killing 31 baboons in simulated from the wild, and practically the sole car smashes, supplier of Old World species to British laboratories,

> They will have arrived from the wild in a state of stress and sickness incurred by rapid switches through alien environments. For the flight itself, perhaps half a dozen strangers would have been crated together. Fighting is not unusual in such circumstances, and since there is nowhere to retreat fatalities occur. It is also typical to find them, when the crate is opened, huddled in each other's arms.

> A former Shamrock worker reported coming across such scenes and also finding dead babies in the containers.

> Shamrock's founder and chairman, Edwin Lonsdale, admits to losing two or three animals from every batch of 50 within the first few days. But a regimen of vitamins and injections, he says, rebuilds the great majority and within about six weeks they are ready for shipment to the customer.

The key machinery for controlling and monitoring the world primate business is the 1973 Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES), to which 77 countries, including Entain, are now party.

All 184 primate species are listed in its appendices. The 66 most threatened are in Appendix I and must not be the subject of "primarily commercial" trans-actions. Included are gorillas, orang utans, chimpanzees and some of the more delicate New World monkeys.

The balance, including such laboratory favourites as cynomolgus, baboons and marmosets, are logged as "vulnerable to unregulated trading" in Appendix II. Appendix I animals require both export and import permits. Appendix (I creatures need export permits only.

The United Kingdom implements CITES principally through the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976, whose Lists A and B conform roughly to CITES I and II. The Department of Environment is advised by the Scientific Authority For Animals. the Scientific Authority For Animals whether import licences should be granted for A animals. Any licence applies to just one consignment (usually lasting nine months) of a single species and must be accompanied by a CITES 1970s - according to Shamrock's own journal - 25 cynomolgus were kept in 'a kennel and run with minimal heating in the living area". The 18 that survived were then divided into two experimental groups of nine.

The first batch all perished when night temperatures fell below freezing. Five from the second batch also died during a 14-hour period. The remaining four were saved by an infra-red heater and were left out for the rest of the winter. Despite the losses, the experiment had pointed to "large savings" in heating bills.

Earlier this year the Animal Liberation Front broke into Shamrock, spraying paint and blood and destroying medical equipment. Last month several thousand protesters marched to the Small Dole premises. Now coils of barbed wire have gone up around the perimeter and sentries make night

Edwin Lonsdale seems baffled by the liberationist storm that now whips around his enterprise. In the old days it was simple business, a straightforward matter of humans taking natural precedence over monkeys. He entered the trade after the war when, with two friends, he went to India. Originally it was to collect zoo stock. Then he ran into that bottomless, gilt-edged polio vaccine business.

Mr Lousdale says he has felt "sad" about the fate of his monkeys. "Have done for 25 years", he says. "And that's the truth!" But when he reflects on the "millions of lives saved" due to primate-assisted medical developments, he expresses no qualms whatsoever. "I'd sooner all the monkeys in Africa than my family. And my

. All the monkeys in Africa and Asia. and South America are indeed threatened by the vanity of the advancing human populations. The highest primate - the human - requires the monkey's habitat, both timber and land. And if the monkey continues to haunt its old territory, it will be killed as a pest or, better yet, trapped and sold to eager western traders.

Breaking the culture barrier Culture is booming in Melina Mercouri's Greece: there have been more festivals and special events this summer than ever before in the country's history, many of them sponsored by the Ministry of Culture, local authorities and political parties. This formidable and unprecedented boost to the arts has not just assisted established left-wingers such as Theodorakis or the various forms of bouzouki-based music popularized in the West by films like Zorba the Greek and Never on Sunday. For an avant-garde pianist like Sakis Papadimitriou, the new policy has been a blessing as arts patronage had previously flowed almost exclusively from the coffers of shipping millionaires, none of whom are particulary known for their support of experimental art.

Jazz is hardly part of the mainstream anywhere today, and in a country such as Greece, where art in the last 150 years has been inextricably tied up with nationalism, it has been pushed well into the fringe by a commercial music industry which dominates the airwaves and the ubiquitous restaurant jukeboxes. It is perhaps for this reason that Sakis Papadimitriou. Greece's bestknown jazz musician, should be an uncompromising experimenter, who has broken away from the influence of the American musicians who once inspired his playing. In his most recent concert, an event supported by the Thessaloniki city council and the Ministry of Culture, a group of dancers attempted to completely cover Papadimitriou with plastic bottles, as he improvised. He admits freely that his music has become increasingly difficult to distinguish from performance art or Papadimitriou is better-known, in Greece at least, as a writer of short prose pieces and essays, produces regular jazz programmes for ERT, the national radio network and edits and publishes Plus and Minus, a lively periodical devoted to new trends in iazz, improvised music and contemporary art. His music is just one element in a range of exploration beyond the boundries of accepted culture, Greck and international.

Pianist Sakis Papadimitriou has broken out of the confines of mainstream Greek music to emerge in the forefront of avant-parde jazz

Papadimitriou: piano and plastic bottles

Papadimitriou was born 43 years ago in Kavala, and studied law at the University of Salonika. He began writing seriously at 16, and acknowledges in particular the influence of the Salonika school of writers, most of whom are untranslated and unknown outside Greece. There was, too, the inevitable impact of Kerouac, Burroughs, Katka, Sartre, Camus, and others: "I was interested in writing better Greek in playing with the meaning of words and the context of metaphor". By "better Greek", he did not mean the pure Greek pushed so hard by the cultural wing of the Colonels regime, but a language which went beyond appearances, and restored

The same goal lies behind the exploration of pure sound which Papadimitriou pursues in his piano playing. He stretches the piano beyond its ordinary limits, for as well as using the instrument's keys, he also plays the strings inside with a constantly changing arsenal of mallets and metal objects. The result encompasses a series of mood changes, from meditative peace to chaotic violence.

Papadimitriou's concerts are usually followed by lengthy discussions with the audience. He is determined that his various artistic activities should be accessible, and is willing to discuss and explain what he does, although he admits that he may not always be able to clarify a process which in many ways draws its strength from a rejection of logic and rationality. His personal modesty and openness set him apart from the arrogance and dogmatism which often isolate radical innovators: "I want to demystify what I do", he explains; "audiences may be surprised by how quickly I can go from playing so much inside myself to analyzing it five minutes afterwards, but I think that everyone in the arts today should be ready to discuss what he is doing." Many of the questions are political, and Papadimitriou admits that what he is doing raises fundamental political

He is not prepared to follow any party line, a position which has grown increasingly difficult now that the Socialist and Communist Parties tussle for the youth vote by organizing musical events: "Improvization is identified with the left in all countries, but I refuse to be involved with any political party. I discuss politics, but I will not join any movement. I refused to play in a concert to support Solidarity because I felt that it was wrong for slogans rather than music to unite people." He also refused invitations to take part in concerts organized by the Young Socialists and Communists.

The political situation today, however, is clearly one he finds easier to cope with, and preferable to the near total consorship that existed under the Colonels, During the days of the Junta, Papadimitriou recalls, "There was no question of doing anything. You could write short things about music and book reviews, but nothing that might be considered 'peculiar' by them. You needed a permit to give a concert". It was a period during which he travelled a great deal, and even tried living in London for a while; but he always returned to Greece, unwilling to substitute the excitement of the international scene for a deep sense of belonging to the country of his birth.

At the end of the year Vivienne Westwood will receive one of the fashion industry's highest accolades when, like Jean Muir and Zandra Rhodes before her, she will represent Britain in the Women's Wear-Daily Biannual Best of Five event in Tokyo, alongside such names as Calvin Klein of the US. It seems that she has made a niche in the fashion establishment, and perhaps changed its point of view a little. Will she be able to keep one foot in the street and one in high fashion? If she is still getting her cloths talked about in five years time, she'll have achieved something unique. As anthropologist Ted Polhemus, co-author of Fashion and Anti-Fashion put it: "High fashion has undoubtedly gained by admitting Vivienne to their fold. Has street style lost its greatest champion?"

As a classic, the text is of course unaltered from the hardback original, which is unfortunate because over the intervening years Goff had forgotton that his intended ending to the book was cut by John Pudney, then editorial director at Putnams. Goff had it reinstated for the subsequent paperback, but it is missing again from the new edition. "It is strange how one forgets something that seemed so important at the time". Goff muses.

Give the watchdogs more bite

The electricity industry has just declared a surplus of £332m for 1982/83, pleasing the Treasury but not consumers. In New York last year, the regulatory commission ordered the private gas and electric utilities to return $104m excess profits to customers. Mon-opoly services in Britain are publicly owned and rarely give anything back.

It is clear that if we are going to privatize natural monopolies they must be regulated. Oftel has been created to regulate British Telecom, and a debate is in progress on how best it should function. But some form of regulation is also needed for monopolies such as electricity, posts, and water, which are likely to remain public for a long time

Franklin Roosevelt, as Governor of New York State, said that regulatory commissions were to be "the representatives of the people to see that utilities do two things: give service and charge a reasonable rate".

The commissions have a judicial power to determine issues. They base their decisions on federal and state laws, and on their own precedents. When a private American utility wants to increase its tariffs, it has to apply to the commissioners and justify the reasons for the increase in great detail. It has to go through its budget in a process that is similar to a public inquiry (but is under oath). The commission's staff critically analyse the utility's submission and, to assist their analysis, can demand any information.

The commissioners' ruling on an application gives detailed reasons for their decision, which can be challenged in the courts. They may disallow certain expenditures, such as excessive advertising or cost overruns on capital schemes that have been mismanaged, and would definitely disallow losses on activities that are secondary to the utility's main business, such as appliance selling and gas and electrical contracting. Disallowed costs are carried by the shareholders - an incentive for good management - and cannot be passed on to consumers (as happens here, without any explanation).

The rigour and openness of this process in

to a $2,700m arms deal which will ensure Israel the delivery of 75 ultra-sophisticated F-16 warplanes.

The little-publicized signing ceremony was significant not only because of the size of the deal - the largest ever negotiated between Israel and the US - but also for its symbolism. At the Foreign Ministry in Jerusalem, it was viewed as conclusive proof that Israel has shaken off the status of diplomatic north on June 6, 1982, the impending F-16 deal was indefinitely frozen on the instructions of President Reagan. The decision to allow it to proceed was taken in Washington soon after May 17 this year, the day that Israel signed the pact with Lebanon which has proved the key to its escape from diplomatic isolation.

"Although the agreement has never been implemented, or even ratified by the Lebanese govern-ment, it was seen around the world as evidence of our good intentions," explained an Israeli official. "The mere fact that we had signed our second pact with an Arab neighbour made a lot of governments look at us in a different light."

In addition to the agreement - which is destined never to come into operation until Syria agrees to leave Lebanon - the departure of reserve General Ariel Sharon from the Defence Ministry, and the ambitions of Colonel Gadaffi of Libya, have also helped the Begin government stage its diplomatic comeback.

Soon after Israeli tanks rumbled

Alex Henney puts the case for American-style regulation of our monopoly services, whether privatized or remaining in the public sector stark contrast to British practice. In electricity supply, the Generating Board sets its wholesale tariffs (some 80 per cent of the final price to the consumer) in secret discussions with the government and the Electricity Council, and has resisted consultation with the Electricity Consumers Council. As for retail tariffs, the London Electricity Board (and I suspect others are little different) traditionally receives a schedule showing the proposed tariffs, a sales and demand forecast, an explanatory memorandum about fuel costs and government financial targets, and a one-page budget for LEB's operating costs of nearly £200m. With such skimpy documentation, I cannot see how Board members can be satisfied that they are fulfilling their duties to promote the efficient distribution of electricity and avoid tariff discrimination.

The consumer councils have neither the powers nor, with some exceptions, the expertise to scrutinize and challenge industries' performance. In electricity, they typically spend only two or three hours a year considering tariffs, often in closed session, and show little interest in valuefor-money audits. The record of government has not been much better. It has frequently been criticized in official reports for failing to monitor nationalized industries; it "asked" them to publish performance indicators in 1967, but did not follow up effectively. The Price Commission was often facile, and it was toothless. The industries, for their part, are unduly secretive and have always resisted external scrutiny.

Times are changing, and the Government is taking a more active interest in efficiency, and in making the industries more open. It has started to set performance targets for LEB.

As the dust of Lebanon settles, diplomatic victories on all fronts boards, has directed the Monopolies Commission to management audit them, and is requiring them to publish better indicators. It has made the planning application for the Sizewell B nuclear power station into a major public inquiry.

But we must go further to make public, boards more accountable and consumer responsive. We must abolish cosy paternalism in favour of public accountability, public performance monitoring public scrutiny - and bonuses for managers who perform well. External board members should be given clear statutory responsibilities, including that of operating scrutiny committees, and a fiduciary duty that could be challenged in the courts. The standard required of the industries' external auditors should be raised to that now required of local authority audits, namely to report on matters in the public interest and on value for money in consumer services.

More radically, we should draw upon best American practice and set up utility commissions. They would scrutinize board performance on behalf of Parliament and consumers, and exercise limited powers of direction. They should hear applications for tariff increases in public and have access to documents; disallow expenditures that are not adequately justified; undertake efficiency studies and order boards to discontinue loss-making peripheral activi-ties; direct the form of their reports and accounts, and rule on consumer complaints.

Given the right statutory framework, commissions would distance monopoly services from the government, getting it away from the current minutiae with which it is involved and leaving it to concentrate on major issues. We need to reduce the scope for the sloppiness, ambiguities, and confusion that have characterized relations between governments, nationalized industries, and their consumers for the last 30 years and to develop an adequate system of checks and balances.

The purpose of danting is the dance. The purpose of chatter is the chat. Human life presents countless such social occasions, in which we renounce our business, and find pleasure in the present moment alone. All time not spent in dancing or in conversation is wasted time. For these moments contain not the means of human existence but the end. The dancer and the talker are at rest - but actively at rest, rejoicing in their social condition, and at one with their fellow men.

The most valuable relations are also those, like friendship, which have no further purpose. The opposite of friendship is not hatred but crime. The criminal is the manwhose purposes take precedence over every opposing claim. He is the man prepared, through force, fraud or annihilation, to discount the freedom of the other who stands in his way. He is the true enemy of peace, for he destroys the trust which makes conversation possible.

States are more like people than they are like anything else; they exist by purpose, reason, suffering and joy. And peace between states is also like peace between people. It involves the willing renunciation of purpose, in the mutual desire, not to do but to be do, but to be. Peace is endangered, therefore, not by the weapons of the peaceful, but by the actions of the purposeful.

There exist states, just as there exist people, whose lives are structured by a purpose; and who cannot accept another's freedom as an obstacle to its fulfilment. The overriding aim is so urgent that neither the freedom nor the existence of another politic can deflect it.

If the purpose is also international involving transformations beyond the frontiers of municipal government – then peace has already been put at risk. We know this from Iran and Libya. But we ought also to have known it from the Soviet Union, a state founded upon a consuming international purpose, which has never ceased to impose its preferred political order upon unwilling recipients, whether in its own domains, or in the domains of clients and neighbours. Criminal law exists in order to deter the over-purposeful. But international law, which lacks the supreme coercive power of a sovereign authority, cannot exert any comparable influence. It is obeyed only because states agree to be bound by it. Of course, all states be bound by it. Or course, an states appear to be bound by international law, since there is value in sustaining this appearance. But states with a ruling purpose cannot really be bound: they cannot be bound "in their hearts." For their hearts are ruled by something other than law, something which discounts law whenever it conflicts with the overriding idea.

shadow of a principle by which they already live. Thus Canada and the United States, each of which is governed by a rule of law, find no difficulty in coexisting, despite longstanding disagreements over territorial waters and disputed islands. No troops amass on their common border, no threats are made, of sanctions imposed. For a legal decision will suffice to regulate the conduct of the parties.

The mark of the purposeful polis is that it cannot be governed by law, that actual law is a pretence, which vanishes just so soon as the ruling purpose is questioned or compromised. Such states are never truly at peace, since they are never at rest. To converse with them is dangerous; to cease to confront them yet more

Consider the Helsinki accords! established in order to reduce the tension in Europe. The "agreement" was twofold: to reduce military preparedness, and to extend human rights. And, for some unaccountable reason, we are still discussing still attempting even to "renew" this "agreement" that has so endangered us! Is it not time that we woke up, time that we realized that we should feel bound by agreements only towards those who are able to

Class warfare on the open road

Now that car registrations have got around to A again (whatever happened to Z; Surely they didn't skip it merely because of associations with that old TV serial?) this is peak alienation time for the average motorist. And that is surely the majority of us, still paying off the loan for some model in the P to T period, wondering uneasily if the tin of aerosol touch-up we finally settled for is too far away, now we actually squirt some out in daylight, from the colour which surrounds the creeping rust on the offside headlight. (And what does that idiotic little ball inside that rattles so, when we shake vigorously for two minutes, as instructed on the tin, actually do? It sounds so loose and unconnected.)
We are definitely Class Three.

Class Two are the ever-diminishing number who can afford to be in the queues alleged to be waiting impatiently for the new letter, plus the evidently ever-increasing number of those who will automatically receive one from their Fleet Buyer (see Class One, below).

It is difficult enough to define our feelings about Class Two. I don't think we actually envy them. Many of us can remember the days when it was possible even for the likes of us to buy a new car, depreciating like crazy from Day One, making us worry about how long we could stay up there. How much worse it must be now they start at £4,000. At least our cars are past worrying about in that way. If we actually had £4,000 there are lots of jollier things we could do than buy a new car. We could get a garage to fix that damn rust on the existing car (engine surely good for another 50,000 miles) and take a few friends to some marvellous place we haven't seen yet (in my case, Venice). Get fitted carpet on the landing and the other bedrooms. Buy three more old cars for teenage children (save us being a taxi service). Perhaps even manage Covent Garden more than once every three years.

On the one hand, if it were not for Class Two there would not be a car industry, and somehow this would affect all the other industries. We should be peasants in smocks, stared at by Japanese and even Taiwanese tourists, and England would some-how be full of flies. On the other hand, it is because of these Class Two people that we pass, on the pavements and in rows outside garages on the outskirts of cities. where land is cheaper, hundreds and hundreds of the kind of car we know in our hearts we shall have to get when this thing finally stops dead with a broken piston (and they do, a brilliant anticipation? Now, one is constantly reading, or hearing on TV, about Class One, the Fleet Buyers. What feelings should we have towards them? Up to now they have lowards them? Up to now they have always been men, of a curiously forgettable kind; Well, sooner or later, some of them, as in every other job in the world except that of the Papacy, will be women. You couldn't imagine a Mamacy, but it's perfectly possible to imagine

The question is, have the manufacturers imagined them? Has it, for instance, occurred to them that almost all car names up till now have been classic examples of male chauvinism? Indeed, the very first one I can remember (having grown up in Coventry in or near which were made, with the exception of Vauxhall and Ford, all British cars, which 98 per cent of British people used to buy; Standard, Alvis, Triumph, Armstrong-Siddeley, Daimler, Morris, Singer, Riley, Hillman, Humber, with Rover and Austin not far away) was the Hillman Minx With Spitfire, the perfect image of woman as a kind of spirited toy.

Then came all the male macho names Rapier, Jaguar, Stag, Scimi-tar, Avenger (what of, for goodness' sake? Somebody, daring to try to pass you?) Following this, perhaps from an awareness that there were already women buyers, if not Fleet Buyers, a softening, down to Herald, Cavalier, Escort.

Then there were sports and resorts, Corina, Granada, Golf, Polo, one hopes against hope that when when the Chinese finally export one it will be the Ping Pong. Or total mysteries, like the Passat (an expensive resort in the Atlas Mountains, known only to rich

The psychologists employed by these increasingly faceless and inter-linked giant car firms will have their work cut out to find names striking a chord in the Woman Fleet Buyer. Shall we soon be driving Atalantas, Gonerils, or the Alecto, Mogacia or Tisiphone (the Furies), the Virago, Termagant Six, Tigresse, Regan, Lesbia, Amazon, Lady Macheth? Until last weekend King Stephen of Hungary was simply the man who established Christianity in his country. He was crowned on Christmas Day in the year 1000, received the blessing of the Pope and, in due course, was canonized. Later, on his feast day, King Wenceslaus went out and gathered winter fuel, providing useful material for a carol. That was about it a good pedigree, a decent sort of life.

Now Stephen has become the hero of a rock opera, Hungary's first. Stephen the King written by the rock musician Levente Szorenyi and the lyricist Janos Brody, has just been performed for three days in Buda-Actress Eniko Toth provided the love interest and costumiers ran up

The opera illustrates the competing trends in the official approach to rock music in Eastern Europe. One trend takes its measure from Moscow where the new Andropovian ideological message is protect the young steer them in "progress-ive" directions, be vigilant against western decadence, take off your Pink Floyd T-shirts. In Moscow some rock bands - notably The Peddlers - have been banned, others reprimanded for distorting tra-ditional Russian tunes, In Poland, punk bands such as Perfekt have been barred from appearing, the group SS-20 has been told to change its name, and lyrics are regularly

The other trend is dictated by economics: hard currency is at a premium and some groups can sell their products abroad. These are tolerated. Even western groups such as Nazareth have been allowed to perform in Hungary - providing that a suitable deal is reached. In the case of Nazareth, the performance - in the Budapest hills - will be filmed. and will feature in an American-Hungarian horror film to be marketed abroad. It is financed by British money.

Stephen the King is an extension of this trend. Rock operas, East European planners have decided, are e. Thus the director of theatre of the Lenin Komsomol in Moscow is planning to take his successful rock opera Junona and Awas to the west. In Poland, businessmen have been considering for some time now how a similar scheme could be worked. One idea is that British groups whose reputations are beginning to flag in the West could be brought to the East for relatively cheap tours. Then make a record at Polish studies, which could be sold in the West. This would meet domestic demand and satisfy the current hunger for hard currency.

The best bet, for the East European planners is still rock opers. The ideological message can betraying their love.

Stephen is not quiet as bad but it too shows a concern with the past, a sense of national continuity that preof all performing arts provided a vast and foregettable crop of operas about the building of power stations, a favourite metaphor for the building of socialism.

But must all rock operas be set in the distant past? Can we not look forward to a spectacular laser show about Stalin's friendship with Trotsky? Can we set the purges to music? Watch this space.

LENDER OF LAST RESORT

Aid to poor countries has never been free of controversy, but rarely has the debate been as heartfelt as it is now. While the poorest countries feel the onslaught of the world recession most keenly, the rich are suffering an acute attack of what Mr A. Clausen, the president of the World Bank, has colourfully called "aid fatigue." Multilateral aid agencies are especially susceptible to this complaint, and the worst afflicted at present is the International Development Association.

IDA is the concessionary loan arm of the World Bank, lending to the most indigent peoples on the most generous of terms. Since its formation in 1961 it has gained general respect for the efficiency of its programmes, and is widely regarded as the best run-multilateral aid agency. Even IDA's powerful critics in Washington accept that its funds are not wasted.

But that recognition has not prevented the American administration from announcing that its contributions to the seventh round of IDA funding, due to start on July I next year, will be severely cut. If, as it says, these contributions are reduced from. about $1,000m a year to $750m, other countries would normally lower their contributions as well because they are supposed to reflect relative economic size. So the total funding for IDA might fall from $12,000m, the level for the past four years, to $9,000m in nominal terms. In real terms, of course, the reduction would be much more.

The US administration, which is antipathetic to aid, is suspicious of IDA because that body is largely unpartisan. Congress believes that IDA lends too much to countries hostile to the United States, and prefers the tighter control conferred by bilateral assistance. So adamant . A second course is for IDA to

IDA is very worried that the both $16,000m it believes to be the minimum necessary may prove unattainable

Broadly speaking, the other major donor countries favour a larger IDA than that implied by the United States, and Japan has offered to raise its percentage share. Time is running out for an agreement to bring IDA 7 into operation by the middle of next

There is a strong case for sustaining IDA. Not only is it an effective organization, but it is hard to replace. Because its loans are over 50 years and carry no. interest, the net disbursements are very high. For countries such as those in sub-Saharan Africa which depend heavily on IDA a shortfall in assistance could be painful. It is most unlikely that other agencies would step into the breach, given the general reduction in aid budgets, and these are hardly the countries to be favoured by commercial banks already dangerously exposed in Latin America.

Sustaining IDA does not necessarily mean supplying the full amount its officials are asking for. If it were to continue to be funded at $12,000m there would be less in real terms than payments. for IDA 6, even before China, a new IDA member, is taken into reduction. One is to change the eligibility criteria for borrowing that India, the biggest recipient, is now in a sufficiently healthy state to raise substantial loans on bank finance for some projects than for others. But a partial graduation from IDA would free funds for China raises and dispenses money. Under its charter, IDA is allowed to borrow commercially, from members and from the markets. It could borrow at subsidised rates from members, and would certainly command the finest rates in the market. Conversely, this would imply charging more for loans. Maturities might be shortened, say to 30 years, for the "blend" countries which also borrow from the more expensive World Bank, and IDA could even charge nominal interest, depending on the recipient's circum-

STATICES.

So far, however, the IDA management has been unwilling actively to explore these possibilities. Those countries that. recognize the virtues of a strong and well-funded IDA should be encouraging debate and providing the leadership partly abdicated by the Americans. Britain has an important role to play. Some 70 per cent of this country's contribution to IDA goes to Commonwealth members, and for every pound contributed Britain receives two in orders. Mr Aguino's own description of his rival President Marcos conveys the style: "a very calculating man, who would rather persuade before he bribes, bribe before he threatens, threaten before he arrests, arrest before he kills".

Even allowing for this violence, the known circumstances are incredible enough. In July, two months after Mr Aquino had announced his intended return, with or without a passport, he was given a message from President Marcos warning him that there were men after his blood and that the government needed more time to "neutralize" these agents of revenge, otherwise Mr Aquino might > Public feeling may be so much jolted and shamed by what has happened that, whatever the explanation proffered, a shift away from President Marcos will be accelerated. Already this has been set in motion by disappointment over the economy. In many other ways the glamour attaching to the President has not much life left in it; not enough, perhaps, to carry him through the four years left of his current term.

Some such opinion seems to be gaining ground in Washingand air bases in the Philippines make it the most important country in south-east. Asia in American consideration. If there is to be change it had better not be sudden or unforeseen, such as Soan's catastropi dismissal in Iran. Relations with President Carter were cool because he made much of human rights; President Reagan has been full of warmth for President Marcos as a sound ally. Some distancing from this uncertain leader has been suggested and may now be urged more strongly, especially as the agreement for American bases is due for enewal next year.

There are other sources of generalized criticism of President Marcos that carry weight. When he visited the Philippines in February, 1981, Pope John Paul said pointedly that the exigencies of state should not take precedence over human rights. Since that visit the Roman Catholic church in the Philippines has been more and more critical of the way in which President Marcos uses his dictatorial power. Mr Aquino's death will have its reverberations, far beyond the Philippines.

A RAT TO THE RESCUE

It is easy to be superior about the reasons for the turn-round in the fortunes of TV-am's Good Morning Britain programme. It has recovered from the depths of despair at weekday peak viewing figures of 200,000 in the spring to 1,600,000, 400,000 more than its rival, the BBC's Breakfast Time. Dieting with Miss Diana Dors, pop videos and cartoons. are clearly what people like at that time of day. And who, in a free society, can complain if such harmless wants are gratified?

The hero of the revival at Camden Lock is Mr Greg Dyke who was brought in from London Weekend Television 10 lead the station from the brink of ruin. But its symbol is Roland Rat, an engaging creature with a Black Country accent. His snappy chat, interspersed with children's cartoons, draws TV-am's peak audience at nine o'clock in the morning. He even manages to incorporate into his routine Mr Peter Jay's "mission to explain" which so impressed the Independent Broadcasting Authority before awarding its breakfast television franchise.

Last Friday, for example, Roland, who travels the highways and by-ways in an old 1950s Ford emblazoned with the crest "Rat on the Road", was visiting Blenheim. He found time to put right the intellectual shortcomings of his foil, Kevin the Gerbil, who insisted that the most famous baby to be born at the Palace, Sir Winston Churchill, had been a king. With a quick quote forn the old warrior's "Never in the history of human conflict" speech, Roland told Kevin that Sir Winston had been a "Prime Minster" (sic). With a bit of gratuitous criticism of Shakespeare for having written his sonnets with lines the wrong way round, the furry duo were back on the road. As Mr Dyke clearly appreciates, the British have always had a weakness for showbusiness animals like Larry the Lamb with his cracked, clubland accent, Flanders and Swann's Gnu, birds or even insects as witnessed by the enduring popularity of Mr Arthur Askey's busy bee. The weakness is doubtless shared by the "Good and Great" who make up the IBA; but they cannot be entirely happy at the manner of TV-ams renaissance. Despite Roland's skill as a historian and literary critic, its output bears no relationship to the original prospectus submitted by Mr Jay and the "Famous Five".

The IBA has a duty under section 3 (1) of the Television Act, 1954, to satisfy itself that programmes maintain a proper balance in their subject matter and a high general standard of quality". When Mr Dyke rode to the rescue, there were fears that he would take an exclusively low road to recovery. This he has done. The IBA, no doubt, is mightily relieved that it is not faced with a bankrupt, no-hope television station. The story of Camden Lock has shown that the IBA has both failed in its statutory duty as the public's guardian of quality and that it has no influence, despite the power of the franchise, for shaping public taste.

Nameless JPs

From Mr A. J. M. Baldwin Sir, The real problem is surely this. No one seems to expect the names of justices to be given to defendants for obvious reasons, but some expect. the names to be given to newspaper reporters. Reporters only want the justices' names so that they can publish them in their newspapers. As some defendants presumably read newspapers, a court which gives the names of justices to the press is indirectly giving them to

Over the years I have found that justices are generally not unhappy about their names being given to the press - with the possible exception of the magistrate who had his cafe burnt down on a number of occasions by a dissatisfied "customer" - but I have also found that when the problem is pointed out to reporters they are normally prepared 10 avoid putting justices at risk unnecessarily, and their account of the proceedings is none the worse for omitting the chairman's name In any event the press must be aware, even if the defendant is not, that the decision the chairman announces may not accord with his or her own view; he or she is simply expressing the decision of the court. Yours faithfully, ALAN J. M. BALDWIN. Clerk of the Justices, Hanworth Road,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

social needs

From Mr G. C. Ingram

Sir, I refer to your leader (August 17) on the privatization of nationalized industries. In my opinion, your reasoning results in a misleading conclusion since you apply econ-omic criteria to a situation that must be considered in a wider social context. Therefore the danger is not so much in "failing to think through the purpose of privatization", more in forgetting one of the purposes for nationalization, namely, total public benefit

I agree that the ultimate benefit to e community is what matters. However, to measure this solely in economic terms prolongs the confusion that has existed since 1948. The concept of marginal cost pricing so bravely proposed in the 1967 White Paper (Nationalized Industries, A Review of Economic and Financial Objectives), was enerally abandoned in 1978 (The Nationalized Industries, Cand 7131) as being unworkable.

Some people have argued that social benefit can be measured by a "willingness to pay" (R. Turvey in his book. Economic Analysis and Public Enterprise) but this also evades the complexities of the situation.

This letter is not intended a ustification for maintaining unprofitable operations and a quiet life, or for resource misallocation. It is a plea to consider privatization with a social conscience rather than simply political rhetoric.

The elimination of loss-making sections of the nationalized industries simply because they do not, or cannot be made to conform to marginal cost pricing will certainly lead to a "massive and irreversible change" - to the nation's detriment. Yours faithfully, G. C. INGRAM,

Facts come first

From Dr Cyril S. Smith

Sir, In your leader, "Facts come first" (August 9) you suggested that this council might be commissioned to conduct research to provide "models of the welfare state and its finances in the 1990s built on a variety of economic assumptions".

It is not "too much to ask" the SSRC to back such work (as one of your correspondents puts it) - this council has been actively seeking out and supporting good research in these areas for a long time.

With more money, of course, more could be done. Yours faithfully, CYRIL S. SMITH, Secretary, Social Science Research Council, 1 Temple Avenue, ECA. August 17.

Belt-pinching

From Mr Oliver Smedley

Sir, As a former director of First Garden City Limited, the company which owned the freehold and developed the town of Letchworth in accordance with the enlightened vision of Ebenezer Howard, I was as depressed to read of the Luddite intention of the National Trust to fight any Government policy which threatens to "nibble" at the green belt as I was uplified to read of the rejection on ecological grounds of plans to develop the Gunnersbury

Triangle.
The green belt idea is out of date and fundamentally wrong in principle. What are required in cities are green centres. Without its parks, its commons, its squares, its gardens and, of course, its river, London, for instance, would be uninhabitable by civilised human beings.

The excessive pressure on the limited amount of building land caused by the green belt policy brought about the postwar tower block scandal, accompanied, of course, by enormous profits for land speculators and developers. Yours faithfully. OLIVER SMEDLEY. Garden Cottage, Wendens Ambo.

Privatization and Soviet imperial burden to be welcomed

From Mr Correlli Barnett,

Sir, Your leading articles (August 18, 19, 20) on Soviet imperialism and on the British contribution to the defence of western Europe need to be read as related essays on "total strategy" and as such I find them flawed and unbalanced.

To take the question of the Soviet Union first, of course we must accept that the leadership of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union can never rest easy while any independent centre of power or thought remains in the world to challenge their own minority domination and closed intellectual system within the Soviet Empire under the flag, and the larger imperialist sphere of control in eastern Europe.

That is inherent in the origins of the party as a conspiracy for the seizing and holding of power, in the nature of the coup d'état by which it succeeded in the first aim, and the entire process since 1917 by which it has pursued the second. But do not let us give way to an undiscriminating alarm at Soviet efforts to extend the red on the map of the world, not least by building a high sea fleet.

Such extension does not necessarily mean an enhancement of Soviet power, and may well mean strategic and economic over-extension, and hence weakness. This was certainly the case with the British Empire and British imperialism by the 1920s and 1930s when, from an inadequate power base of a stagnant and backward economy, Britain had to provide for the defence of the Empire from Europe to the Far East.

As you will know, Sir, the main theme of strategic debate within Whitehall in that era lay in the insoluble puzzle of how to defend an indefensible Empire, given the national myth that the Empire buttressed British power rather than drained it. Indeed that "pink on the map" served as psychological compensation, a delusive mask, for Britain's true position as a second-rate economic power.

I am convinced that similar considerations apply to Soviet Russia today, perhaps even more so since the Soviet leadership is electing to carry an enormous military budget on the back of what even Andropov acknowledges is virtually a third-world economy. Let us therefore guard our vital strategic interests, while taking pleasure in the strain induced in the Soviet system by its attempts to play the role of superpower.
You do acknowledge that western Europe is indeed a Western and British vital strategic interest, but your proposals for defending it appear to have been drafted by Neville Chamberlain's ghost. Our allies are to provide the main defensive cover on land, while we enjoy the softer options of air power and sea power, coupled with a BAOR as a reserve held back in Germany is only one stage from being held back in Britain (which would not be unwelcome to the "blue water" school in Whitehall): a return to the BEF of 1914 and 1939, and a return also to the politically disastrous sponginess of the British commitment to European defence before 1914 and again before 1939.

The withdrawal of BAOR from a "first-day" battle-front role in Gernany would surely be militarily and politically to pull away one of the essential props of the whole Nato structure. Even Neville Chamberlain had to admit in the Even Neville end that the security of western Europe was the bedrock British interest. Yours faithfully

CORRELLI BARNETT, Churchill College, Cambridge. August 20.

Dispute over Belize

From Dr Victor Bulmer-Thomas Sir, The old story that Churchill did not know where Guatemala was, referred to by George Walden in his recent feature on Belize (August 12), must surely be incorrect; as a correspondent in Cuba during the Spanish-American War, he could not fail to have known its location. One suspects that the story is repeated so often in order to conceal the ignorance of other, less informed, journalists!

This, I fear, may be true in the case of George Walden. His interpretation of the Anglo-Guatemalan dispute over Belize (formerly British Honduras) involves several serious errors and appears to have drawn the wrong lessons from the dispute with Argentina over the Falkland islands.

The dispute with Guatemala and 1859 involves much more than the construction of a road. Any scholarly work on the subject (and there have been several) will confirm that the British hold on the Belize settlement was tenuous in international law and the 1859 treaty involved a substantial concession by Guatemala. The treaty was not "denounced" by Guatemala; its sequel, the 1863 convention, was not ratified by Great Britain as a result of delays on the Guatemalan side.

Nor is it fair to claim that the 1981 heads of agreement were "turned down" by Guatemala's leaders. The failure of the heads of agreement was due as much, if not more so, to the Belizean Prime Minister's intransigence over what in retrospect were very minor concessions to Guatemala.

As long as the dispute continues, British troops will be needed in Belize. Their presence, however, should be determined not by Washington's strategic interests in Central America (as suggested by Walden), but by the possibility of an invasion from Guatemala. This should not be used as an excuse by either Great Britain or Belize for not reaching a settlement with Guatemala; despite Walden's remarks, the Belizean economy is extremely fragile and long-term, socially desirable investment is impeded by Guatemala's claims.

The disputes over both Belize and the Palkland Islands make clear that the problems will not simply "go away". In both cases, the claims of ex-Spanish colonies have been pursued irrespective of the nature of the government in power. Unlike Argentina, however, Guatemala has shown a great deal of flexibility in recent years despite the turmoil of its own internal politics.

The need, therefore, is for a swift and skilful diplomatic solution to the problem, a solution which will become more difficult if the presence of British troops is defended on grounds other than Belizean security. Yours faithfully,

VICTOR BULMER-THOMAS, University of London, Queen Mary College, Mile End Road, El. August 15.

Body and mind

From Dr Andrew Millar

Sir, There may be substance in the articles of Ruth West and Brian lnglis, but their arguments were substantially based on erroneous and sadly misinterpreted evidence. For example, the large print on August 9, stated: "Treatment for asthma has been proved useless". This is simply untrue.

The subsequent text is less misleading and restricts its criticism to the treatment of severe (life threatening) asthmatic attacks, but nevertheless takes the clear and honest article from the Lancet out of Opren is chief witness in the curt dismissal of treatment for arthritis. Side-effects of anti-inflammatory drugs are well recognised, but the benefits far outweigh them. Opren is an effective agent which generated its own popularity; the recognition of its fatal side-effects was a tribute to those who monitor prescribing, but its failure in no way detracts from the value of other drugs. I think that "needles in meridians" are unlikely to alter the course of any acute inflammatory process, but if someone can show me otherwise, and the experiment would be simple, I am ready to be convinced.

Your authors plumb the depths when they write "how useless and often lethal conventional treatment of heart disease is" and attribute this to Professor J. R. A. Mitchell's excellent review of the treatment of myocardial infarction. Mitchell did not discuss any other aspects of heart disease apart from infarction. Nowhere in his keenly critical appraisal of what we actually know did he say that conventional treatment was useless or lethal. He did not the total treatment was useless or lethal. did point out that high technology medicine and surgical intervention had been disappointing.

In fairness to the Papworth consultant who was derisively quoted by West and Inglis, asking for surgical intervention in acute myocardial infarction is like asking a car mechanic to repair a corroded and blocked fuel pipe using the windscreen washer tubing, or au engine with a cracked piston while running the workshop light from the alternator. As Mitchell says: "perhaps we should insist that patients Yours faithfully should display adequate care for ROY McKAY, their own health by becoming slim, scat-belt wearing non-smokers before we intervene."

Frankly either you're ill or you're not. If you're not ill, you can still feel up or down, well or not so good. People get rid of these feelings in different ways: some people cut down on drink, some take fresh air, some a change of scenery. If people wish to accomplish the same thing by seeing an acupuncturist or a homeopath, that is fine by me. But, if I get crashing heart failure, a loop of gangrenous bowel or a fractured femur. Grief-smitten

From Canon Roy McKay Sir, As a fully paid up member of the Moreover Fan Club, may I express my gratitude to Miles Kington for his article, "Good news, there's been a disaster" (August 19). It's high time that TV news took a long, hard look at its ugly habits.

Mr Kington's suggestions for special features, Private Funeral and Blood and Guts, might well have a cathartic effect. As a milder emetic all TV news editors should be obliged to recite daily Cranmer's famous words: "From plague, pestilence, and famine; from battle and murder, and from sudden death; Good Lord, deliver us."

There are other things happening. Yours faithfully, 64 Thomas More House, August 20.

Religion and the TV ratings

From the Director General of the St-Independent Broadcasting Authority is Sir. Your leader in today's edition (August 18) suggested that there had been no debate before the IBA took its decision to move part of Sunday religious programmes on ITV to 2pm. That is not the case. The pros and cons of the simultaneous scheduling of religious programming on BBC i and ITV has been discussed between the broadcasting authorities and the churches for many years. Even with the new arrangements, 35 minutes of religious programming will still be scheduled "back-to-back" on Sunday evenings between 6.40pm and

The IBA was well aware of the departure from precedent when it decided to accept the ITV companies' proposal and therefore to decline the contrary advice of the Central Religious Advisory Committee. The IBA had recognised, however, that the 6pm placing. however attractive it might seem in theory, was not actually drawing audiences in very impressive

This might have been the result of the programmes' own content, but it was also in part the result of intense competition from the BBC. Independent television is a wholly selffinancing service, bearing the present burdens of sustaining Channel 4, which is also providing religious programmes regularly. It cannot overlook the realities of its commercial situation. The IBA has said this change in scheduling will be reviewed in the spring of next year, following further dicussions with the churches. Whether the BBC chooses to alter its arrangements for the placing of its Sunday religious output is a matter for the corporation, but the licence fee does offer a measure of protection not available to the ITV companies and no doubt the BBC will have that in mind in deciding its course of action. We know that our decision has troubled the churches, but the IBA cannot ignore a changing situation of intensifying competition. The composition of schedules is inevitably undergoing changes as audiences become increasingly free to determine schedules for themselves, having the ability to hire or record programmes.

This presents a great dilemma for the broadcasting authorities charged with protecting the public interest with, in the IBA's case, an inescapable recognition that the power to direct companies' output in particular directions is bound to be influenced by the need to ensure the companies' continuing financial viability.

Yours faithfully. JOHN WHITNEY. Director General. Authority. 70 Brompton Road, SW3.

At risk of repetition

From the Deputy Managing Director, BBC Radio

Sir, I enjoyed reading Sir Roy Strong's light-hearted assault on Radio 4's repeat policy last Saturday (feature, August 13) and I particu-larly savoured his idiosyncratic extension of the term to cover both trailers and programmes that exploit our unrivalled archival resources. I would have thought it ill became a museum director to suggest that the latter should be left gathering dust. Even the V and A's basement wares get displayed from time to time and very attractively 100.

By his own confession, however, Sir Roy is a passionate devotee of Radio 4 and for this I owe him a straight answer to a straight question. In the year 1978/79 repeats formed 20 per cent of the total network output. Five years on, in 1982/83, the figure was - 20 per cent. No dramatic increase there. Could it be all in the mind?

Of course some people may argue that 20 per cent is too much. We find, however, that more listeners who cannot be permanently glued to their sets - not even while wiring the topiary - are grateful for a chance to catch up with what they have missed.

Finally, may I reassure Sir Roy about the news? Today's headlines are the stuff of tomorrow's history and this, as we all know, has a sneaky tendency to repeat itself without any help from BBC planners. Yours faithfully.

CHARLES MCLELLAND. Deputy Managing Director, BBC Radio, Broadcasting House, W1. August 15.

Even in mundane activities,

The future of the world, nations, and individuals is BRITISH ASSOCIATION being determined to an increasing extent by the predictions of enormously complex math-ematical models analysed on

But there is a danger that the sheer size and complexity of those mathematical equations employed in such diverse fields as war-gaming, analysing the arms race, weather forecasting, and economic prediction may come to dominate the judgments of governments and corporations because of insufficient understanding of the limitations of computer models and of the degree of uncertainty attached to their predictions.

bservations did not come from a latter-day George Orwell, but they were made last night by Sir John Mason, FRS, in his presidential address that marked the opening of this year's annual meeting of the British

Although sounding a cautionary note, Sir John was endorsing the spread of computer modelling. He told his audiprobably agree that major policy decisions should be based as far as possible on rational analyses of the facts and objective predictions rather than on intuitive and subjective Mathematical models were a powerful method for those purposes. But like most powerful tools they were dangerous if used unintelligently and for the wrong job, he concluded.

Sir John, former directorgeneral of the Meteorological Office, drew on experience of computer modelling in weather tained regular cycles of fluctu-

Sir John said it became apparent more than 20 years ago that time-honoured empiri-cal methods, based largely on extrapolation of recent develop-ments and the experience of the human forecasters, were un-likely to improve significantly or produce reliable forecasts for more than 24 hours shead.

With the arrival of powerful computers, it became possible to replace those highly subjective methods by objective techniques that treated weather forecasting as a problem in mathematical physics.

That involved the building of very large and complex models which were mathematical representations of the atmosphere the birth, growth, decay, and movement of the main weather systems. The model atmosphere was divided into 15 layers between the ground and 25km (about 80,000ft), and into a network of points about 150km

He said: "all forecasts, if they are to be credible, must be capable of verification. Weather forecasts are checked every day gainst the actual weather so mistakes are quickly recognized. Hence experience can be built up much more rapidly than in economics where it may take months to verify a prediction."

In the field of policy-making, models should not be used for accurate predictions for the short-term or of very long-term developments, but to indicate underlying trends in the medium term, to help to educate policymakers in the workings of the economic system, its external and internal constraints and on what is feasible and Sir John described the modelwhat is mattainable.

His role was crucial to the world renown for development department with for science-based quality responsibility for much of the for science-based quality achieved by Marks and Spencer, of which he was technical and later merchandise development director until his retirement -

This pioneering work was to have a profound effect not only on the store group's relations with its supplier companies and on its competitors, but also on the whole world of textiles. Kann was born on February

1902, in Hildburghausen, Germany. He studied at Munich and Freiburg Univer-sities, and graduated in chemistry and economics. After working for four years at the Kaiser Withelm Institute for Leather Research in Dresden, in 1927 he joined the firm of Schocken at their head office in Zwickau to start a laboratory for merchandise quality testing and

With the rising tide of anti-semitism he decided to emi-grate, and tried for two years to establish himself in Holland. By then he melized that he needed to move further away from Nazi Germany and on his way to the United States via London he first made contact with Marks and Spencer. This firm had for standardization and quality control of merchandise, but had not been able to find anyone with the necessary qualifi-cations. In 1935 the late Lord Marks appointed him to build up a laboratory which could give imperior advice to the textile industry as a whole, and thus was involved in that important part of the Marks member to be so honoured. By this time his work had long become much more varied, and he was head of the merchandise buying negotiations. He was instrumental in the drive to bring about a closer haison between manufacturer and retailer, and became a respected figure in the textile industry in most part of the world. The approach to quality he pionhasis of much consumer legis-lation, as well as being integral to the purchasing activities of the world's main retail chains.

Kann took great personal interest in the development of staff, and many of those who came under his guidance subsequently went on to achieve positions of eminence. He was a strong believer in textile cducation, and when there was an industry-organized collection to mark his retirement, he used the Kann scholarships in textile technology administered by the Textile Institute. He gave strong support to the institute, of which he was a Fellow, and

Preparing a new administrative elite

Whenever two or three Whitehall watchers are gathered together and the subject of training top civil servants arises, someone will mention "ENA", the Ecole Nationale d'Adminstration in Paris which takes young men and women in their early twenties and turns them into future technocrats, administrators, prime ministers and presidents.

The school is widely credited with producing an elite corps which helps lay the foundations of the French economic miracle in the 1950's despite the surrounding political shambles. The question is often asked 'Why cannot Whitehall have a British ENA?"

Whitehall has never wanted one. It still does not. Mr Noei Moore, principal of the civil service college, said last week: "I have visited ENA, it is a fine institution which happens to suit their educational and cultural background admirably. am not particularly convinced it would be right to translate ENA just as it stands to the British context". Mr Moore believes that, taken over a full career, the British bureaucracy trains its people as well as anyone, with a spell at the college for young administration trainees, refresher and specialist courses for principals and assistant secretaries blended with paractical department experience throughout. Now Mr Moore is engaged in creating a new crowning glory a course for those passing into the magic circle, the 688-strong open structure embracing under-secretaries and above.

Sir Robert Armstrong, Sec-retary of the Cabinet is head hunting a man to design the course and to run it in its initial year or two (the plan is to launch it in autumn 1984). Sir Frank Cooper, former Permanent Secretary at the Ministry of Defence, was asked to take the job but turnd it down, pleading lack of time. The shape and scope of the under secretaries' have been fixed. They are contained in a report produced by Mr Angus Fraser, now chairman of Customs and Excise which the management and personnel office released to The Times last week. The course will last between three and four weeks rather than three months recommended by the Commons Treasury and Civil Service Committee, in a report published in March 1982. About fifty administrators, scientists and professionals enter the under secretary grade each year. The college would need to run two or three courses a year to deal with them (at a cost of £1,000 per head per week). The Fraser Report, however, recommends that individuals from the public and private sectors attend as well, for the purpose of mutual curichment, which would double the load to four or six Courses.

Teaching would be in seminar form ("Blackboard and chalk" is inappropriate for people at that level," says Mr Moore) and would be imparted by senior officials and outsiders with business experience, poss-course will be largely left to the ibly drawing on overseas talent individual chosen as its first. The course would be residential director: "It's all to play for", and its members would convene away from college's beautiful Sunningdale Park near Ascot in Berkshire which, it appears, some senior men regard as too bustling and spartan.

Four weeks is too short to do an ENA for Whitehall's 40 year olds. Mr Fraser suggests concentrating on a unifying theme relevant to all participants like "communications in large orga-nizations", "changing attitudes to work", "management information and resource control" of "the impact of the social and business environment upon decision taking". The new course has a wider significance. It finally removes the question mark hanging over the future of the civil service college which appeared four years ago when Mrs Margaret Thatcher began her search for manpower economies. The place is generally booming despite a requirement in force since April that departments must pay for their trainees where tuition was formerly free. Productivity is up too.

Teaching staff have remained static at about 90. But since 1980-81 courses have increased days from 60,000 to 72,000.

Though Edinburgh is a festival of the arts very much in the plural, it must be admitted that often in the past Art itself -painting and sculpture and such - has come trailing in towards the rear of the field. Of course, everyone thought it a good idea to have a few interesting exhibitions on at the same time, but their provision seemed on the whole to be left to the good sense and/or commercial in-stinct of the Scottish Arts Council and the major selling galleries. The results of this ad hoc policy were sometimes unexpectedly pleasing, in a vague, scattered sort of way, but it feels like a very long time indeed since the really eyeopening exhibitions which a great feature of the festival in the Fifties and early Sixties, when we had the definitive Impressionist Impressionist retrospectives, major tributes to more modern artists like Epstein and unforgenable one-off shows like the 1954 Diaghilev Exhibition.

This year there has clearly been a deliberate attempt to restore that particular tradition, by again putting exhibitions at the very centre of the festival's planning. The principal theme

Berg's Three Orchestral

This must be about the most complex score generally regarded as serious, with anything up to a dozen utterly different things happening at once, and Mr Davie's firm grasp was useful in keeping it all together, keeping it on the brink of an ever-threatening collapse. But the complexity is more than just textural. In this set of pieces there is at least enough material to say. It was unfortunate, too, that the television lighting should have hissed and spoilt Berg's marvellous near-silences, which are as essential as his hollov bombasts, when the wretched box was not even taking the first half of the concert.

Television viewers joined us for the "Choral" Symphony, a favourite at this festival and a work seemingly more to Edinburgh taste than the Berg, although one might think Beethoven was challenging the Vienna of his day quite as outrageously.

Again, Mr Davis rather dimmed the impact by the bigness of his approach. In the first movement he gave all his attention to sternly marking out the string music, so that the woodwind chorus kept coming forward and finding itself embarrassed by having nothing two that Berg went on to write, even in the slow movement, but here the music did not after which the finale was just as noisy and military as one had expected

On the Assembly Hall stage, the unhappiest effect is on Kraus himself. Played by Giles Havergal in the of a hawk-faced family solicitor, he sits impassively at his table throughout the evening, super-cilliously detaching himself from newsprint to deliver crushing judgments on the passing scene: a Diogenes of the fleshpots who invariably awards himself the winning argument. The Electron is bound to be compared to the BBC Micro. However it would be better compared to other micros in its price range, the likes of the Spectrum, Oric and Vic 20. There is however no real comparison as the Electron wins on all counts-it has better graphics, a better keyboard, faster and more versatile Basic We rate the Electron higher than any of its competition. Acom had better be ready for a rush, there's going to be one. What Micro? Sept. '83

Today, Acorn Computers unveil their new home microcomputer, called the Electron.

And, as you can see, it has already met with critical acclaim in its first independent review from one of Britain's leading computer publications.

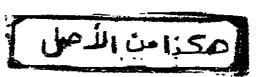

This comes as no surprise as Acorn also produce the only other Micro that uses BBC Basic. (This machine is already being selected by over 80% of U.K. Schools under the current Department of Industry scheme.)

You can judge for yourself just how good the £199 Electron is by visiting the Acorn User Show at the Cunard Hotel, Hammersmith, London from August 25th-28th.

We've every confidence that you and "What Micro?" will be in complete agreement.

Massive new 'banks' deal

by Roger Woolnough

Changes in the banking community, and the opportunities these open up for more automation, have caused two major US computer companies to form joint ventures with third parties to secure their positions in financial markets.

Burroughs Corporation has signed a £21m joint development and manufacturing agreement with Fortronic, the Scottish company which has specialized in banking and financial computer terminals. Simul-taneously, Sperry Corporation announced it is to market the new Ericsson System 2100 branch automation system for financial institutions.

Of the two, the Burroughs-Fortropic deal is the more intriguing. The US company has been serving the financial markets since the end of the last century, and had a turnover in 1982 of $4.2hn. Fortronic was established only in 1970. and is a minnow by comparison. What does it have to offer the US giant?

"The facts of life are you can't do everything", says Bob King, managing director of Burroughs Machines Ltil, the UK subsidiary. "What we are trying to do here is bring the special skills of two groups of people together."

Key to the agreement is Fortronic's development of an intelligent integrated terminal which sits on the bank counter. Burroughs' approach has been to provide modular terminals, which allow users to build up a range of functions as they need them. Both philosophies are valid, but Burroughs' lack of an integrated terminal of its own left a gap in its product line.

"In certain markets, particularly Europe, there is a big demand for an integrated unit, and that is exactly what Fortronic has," explained Clive Bartram of Burroughs. "We are continuing to develop our own modular-type terminals."

Burroughs and Fortronic are not strangers. Since 1981 the two companies have had a marketing accessment on financial terminals covering Emope and Africa. This has resulted in orders approaching 210m, about 76 per cent exports. But the new deal ranges much

It falls into three parts. Under the first, Burroughs is providing Fortronic with £1m to find design and development of a new generation of intelligent integrated fer-minals. Ideas and resources will be pooled by engineers from Scotland, England, France, Switzerland and America.

Then, over the next three years, Burroughs will take delivery of at least 15,000 terminals made at the new Fortronic factory near Dunfermline. This contract is worth at least £20m.

Finally, there will be continuing collaboration to keep pace with market changes and competiti Under the deal between Sperry and Ericsson Information Systems of Stockholm, the Swedish company's branch automation system is to be marketed by Sperry as the UFTS 600 in most European countries, Canada, South Africa and South East Asia. Unlike Fortronic, Ericsson has not taken an integrated approach. The UFTS 600 provides different modules on the bank counter to handle such tasks as customer transactions, computing, communications, passbook printing, and note dispensing.

One thing that all parties are agreed on is that the banking business is changing fast. Sperry says that banks are increasingly subjected to competition, not only from other banks, but also from nonbanking institutions.

Burrough's Clive Bartram points out that in America today, Sears Roebuck offers a full range of financial services, including access to cash via automated teller machines. "In tomorrow's world, what will be a bank?" he asks. "It may well be a department store. That can only be good for the automation suppliers, who are already facing a boom in any case. During 1984 to 1986, Barroughs estimates, the worldwide cashier terminal market will absorb 547,000 units — and that excludes any ers to the money game. A VENTURE which links the travel trade, a young computer company and British Telecom is about to market a hardware and software package which is designed to be equally suitable for the smallest and the largest of travel agents.

Behind the move is Tourism Technology Ltd., which is jointly owned by Future Technology Systems Ltd (FTS), the Association of British Travel Agents (ABTA), and the Travel Agents' Consortium for Information Technology (TACTT). Together they have developed a system which exploits the multi-functional and communications capabilities of the FTS. communications capabilities of the FTS microcomputer. This allows travel agents to use a single piece of equipment for telex. viewdata, bookings with tour operators, communications direct to airlines, data processing and word processing.

Now Tourism Technology has appointed Merlin, the British Telecom business products operation, to market the system exclusively in the UK. Over two years, the contract will be worth £5m to FTS and £2m to Tourism Technology.

"This is probably the first time that any trade association such as ABTA has worked so closely with a manufacturer to bring a product which is tailored to its members' needs", says FTS managing director Peter McHugh. "More important, the trade association - and therefore its members - benefit commercially."

McHugh estimates the potential size of the UK market at 15,000 systems with a minimum price of £5,000. This is based on 5,000 ABTA members, with an average of three systems per user. On top of that there are 3,000 non-ABTA travel agents who are likely purchasers.

JOB SCENE

Status under attack

Now that so many non technical personnel are using computer systems the status of computer professionals is under attack. But changes of status will be fiercely resisted. In the first place special rates of pay for computer staff are becoming rare as they are merged into general clerical and technical grades. Second, job turnover has begun to come down, making staff that flit from employer to employer no longer a valued asset; they are now being judged in the same way as other staff with a patchy employment record

Third, the role of contractors has been firmly established, weakening the subtle blackmail that highly technical personnel in computer departments have used as a weapon to further their careers.

Status has, however, always been a moveable feast in the computer industry. At the beginning, when pioneering systems were built from valve echnology and the applications were scientific and technical, programming had low status.

Designing the system and keeping it running held the glory while the job of programming was mostly performed by women. Once men designers realised that programming was half the job of getting new technology working they muscled into the role, turned programming almost into a black art.

Status is often linked to skill in the computer community; it does not always come from the individual's position in the managerial pecking order.
However, while computer hardware is more and more compact and runs faster and faster, full computer systems, the complex combination of hardware and software, do not have the same radical advances in performance. A lot of the speed of the machine is often absorbed by more complex software, written by skilled employees. As a result the highly skilled can seem to be a bottleneck, an impediment to further productivity increases.

The more non-technical personnel use computers, the less need there seems to be, at least on the surface, for the skilled people. All is, however, far from lost for the status conscious computer professional.

Many have realized that the of users is so vital that it gives them extra leverage, and therefore status, as they fan out over organizations carrying the word the coming of the micro computer.

The stock market entered the second leg of the three-week holiday account hitting a

the next two months,

That defused fears of any further rises in United States interest rates, particularly as the slowing. Some dealers were even talking of significant cuts. This would effectively take the pressure off British rates and rekindles hopes that Britain's prices again soon caused some rekindles hopes that Britain's clearing banks will be able to hold the 91/2 per cent level for longer than expected.

for some heavy buying, with due soon, will not be as bad as long-dated issues, some paying expected.

City Editor's Comment

Shaking off the

'hidden' handout institutions are becoming increasingly irritated about executives who are forced out of companies after oardroom rows, takeover bids and poor results.

And if the City institutions are furious, for once it can be taken as read that they fully reflect the frustrations of smaller share-position to vent their anger

The complaint is not

new. What annoys pension funds and unit trusts most is that they learn about

Mr Gulliver was chairman of the Fine Fare supermarket company at the age of 33. He left in 1973 with "a few hundred thousand pounds" and bought Oriel Foods for £2m. He sold it after a year for £11m.

He began building a stake in ADP in 1979 and acquired most of the supermarkets in the Argyll Foods chain in a £104m deal with Generale Occidentale in June last year.

Equities

Shareholders of Amalag-mated Distilled Products ap-pear to have won the best deal after the decision to merge ADP with the Argyil Foods group, using Mr James Gulliver's family company, James Gulliver Associates, as the vehicle.

The new company, Argyll Group, will have a turnover of £1,365m a year and forecast pretax profits of £36.5m in the year to next March 31. That represents a 27 per cent increase in the last reported pretax profits of the two companies trading separately.

More exciting for ADP shareholders is a forecast total dividend of 4.5p per share over the same period, an increase of 118 per cent.

Moreover, favours ADP shareholders in crude terms of industrial logic. Four new Argyll Group shares are being offered for every three shares in ADP, while existing shareholders of Argyll Foods will be offered a straight one-

On price alone the deal also is good for ADP shareholders who will make about 4p on the four-morning's prices.

Even better are the loger term prospects for the ADP business within the newly-merged group. Without a merger ADP would have run into trouble trying to launch its own spirits brands without the backing of a retail sales group like Argyll, which is now Britain's fourth biggest grocery retail chain. The new Argyll, with the merger out of the way, will consider including an ADP off supermarket. On top of that, Argyli will be able to use its muscle to encourage breweries to stock ADP products in exchange for shelf space in Presto stores for its own beers and spirits. Both sets of shareholders will also be relieved to know that the energies of Mr Gulliver and his able management team are to be channelled into the future development of one, rather than two leading publicly-quoted companies. On a broader front, the merger indicates much about the future development of the retailing sector. Mr Gulliver says that the majors in the industry - Tesco, Asda, Sainsbury and Argyll - are growing British economy. .To some extent, however, these two sets of forces should have been reconciled by the possibility of higher interest rates being discounted in current equity prices. There is a broad agreement in the City that corporate profits will rise by about 20 per cent this year, the best performance

Turning the big guns on the state frontier

Thatcher's Government, privatization and public sector asset sales raised £2bn for the Treasury. In the nest five years, the total could be seen as the total could be as much as £10bn, if all goes according to the Government's plan.

This includes an estimated £4bn from the planned sale of 51 per cent of the shares in British Telecom, the first tranche of which is scheduled to be offered in the autumn of next year.

The new company will be vying with BP for the title of Britain's largest single quoted It is clear that the Governprivatization programme is now entering a more ambitious phase, both in scale and scope.

Not only are the sums involved becoming larger, but the tentacles of privatization are now spreading for the first time into the "heartland" industries that were the original target of Mrs Thatcher's pledge to "roll back the frontiers of the state". The Conservative party manifesto at the last election talked of the Government's intention to sell all or part of British Telecom, British Air-ways, Rolls-Royce, British Sieel, British Shipbuilders, BL and the British Airports Anth-

In terms of assets, numbers employed and strategic influence, these candidates for selloff dwarf most of those that have gone before.

The Government is also intending to introduce private. capital into the National Bus Company dispose of the North Sea oil assets of British Gas (and possibly later privatize the corporation as a whole); sell off the Royal Ordnance factories and complete the disposal of British Rail's hovercraft and Sealink offshoots

The electricity supply industry is also coming under scruting the chairman of both the Electricity Council and the Central Electricity Generating Board have been told by the Government to investigate ways of introducing private capital into their operations. It is no secret that the Prime Minister and her hardline Cabinet supporters were disap-pointed with the slow progress that was made in her first term with both the self-off pro-gramme and the introduction of competitive and market disciplines into the hard core state industries such as coal, rail and Mrs Thatcher and Mr Nigel Lawson, the Chancellor, have made it clear that they want the tempo and range of privatization to be stepped up. This decision was motivated by the Government's well-publicized concern at the need to find ways of mitigating the long-term rise in public spending forecast by both the Treasury and the now disbanded Think Tank.

The sudden package of spending cuts and increased asset sales announced last-month by Mr Lawson was hardly the best opening shot for a privatization campaign.

By announcing the sale of another £500m chunk of BP shares - the simplest expedient open to him for meeting his new asset sale target of £1.25bu for this financial year - Mr lawson has been unable to escape the charge of selling valuable capital assets simply to balance the Government's revenue account. This policy has been described by one nationa-lized industry as "selling the family silver to subsidize riot ous living".

The package has been coolly received in the City and was not wildly popular with many of Mr Lawson's Cabinet colleagues, who resented the maladroit manner in which it was Nevertheless, the Treasury is pressing ahead with new higher forecasts of the sums to be raised by selling state assets. An ambitious junior Treasury minister, Mr John Moore, has been put in charge of coordinating the privatization proposals put forward by sponsoring departments - which in practice means primarily Transport Energy and Trade and Industry.

The White Paper on public spending published at Budget-time envisaged special sales of assets raising £750m this financial year, £1.5bn next year, and £500m the year after. Apart from this year's revised target of £1.25bm, no other official figures have been given.

But with the British Telecom sale alone expected to raise £4bn. (albeit almost certainly spread over three years), the White Paper numbers are clearly too conservative. Of the other immediate candidates for privatization, British Airways and the oil assets of British Gas, also involve substantial sums. Asset sales havebeen likened to 'selling the family silver?

British Airways will now be ready for privatization by the end of next year, according to Lord King, its chairman Depending on the way the Government decides to handle its outstanding debts and pension fund liabilities, the corporation - restored to profitability this year - could be valued by the market at anything between £500m and It is likely, however, that the sale will be delayed until the 1985-86 financial year, con-sidering the competition of market funds from the Telecom The British Gas 'oilfields' disposal was originally sched-uled for the end of this financial year, but may now be delayed until next year. The Government has still to decide whether to float the assets as a separate company, or sell them piece-meal to other oil companies. They could fetch between £300m and £500m.

City analysis estimate that the total asset sales proceeds should average £2bn a year from next year, with 1984-85 as the peak year.

The future candidates pose far more problems, either because they have a poor commercial record (like BL, British Shipbuilders and until recently British Airways), or because (like British Rail, the electricity industry and British Telecom) their businesses have a monor non-commercial shareholding in 1914.

One main constraint on a faster programme, already exercising Mr. Lawson, is the amount of new equity share capital the stock market can absorb. With shares at a record and £2bn of new equity capital-already raised in the first seven months of the year, market conditions are about as buoyant

Most analysts are confident that the market will be able to absorb the British Telecom and especially if the sums raised are offset by lower than expected sales of gilts and the big institutions tire of their splurge of investment abroad.

Nevertheless, with total institutional purchases of equities now running at £4bn, there is a limit to how many share issues the Government can expect to pass off, especially if it wants to avoid knocking share prices as a whole and crowding out private companies that want to raise This is one reason why ministers continue to explore alternative methods of privatization, including joint ventures (the favoured solution of the steel industry, for example) and direct sales of businesses to private sector companies - as may happen with the oil assets of British gas and the profitable warship yards in British Ship-builders.

CRICKET: FLOOD COULD SEND SOMERSET TO A STICKY END

Injury problem for Middlesex but thunderstorm brings ray of hope

resterday, at the end of a good morning's cricket. Middlesex were an all-rounder now, an accomplished off-spinner and a 20 mi for four. When they batted on afterwards, in the hope of picking up a third batting point, Cowans soon threw his wicket away. Without a Garner, neither of them an easy fifth-wicket partnership of 102 chance. Gatting's was on Saturday between Gatting and Emburary when he had not been an easy chance. Gatting's was on Saturday RLOW LORD'S: Somerset, with nine second innings wickets in hand, are 79 runs ahead of Middlesex. A torrential thunderstorm flood-ed Lord's yesterday afternoon and left the pitch, although it had been covered, looking like a paddy-field. If it is still damp today, Middlesex between Gatting and Emburey, scored at a run a minute, the could yet force a wm, though the Gods, it seems, are conspiring Middlesex innings would have been a soory affair. At one point, when Gifford's threat so terrified the batsmen that four wickets fell to him for three runs in 33 balls. Kent had seemed certain to shrivel and die in an inglorious end. Yet there was something comforting and reassuring in Johnson's four-square frame and in his purposeful stride as he took guard. Ormrod was first out, caught at the wicket off Marshall, a good diving catch by Parks. This turned out to be Marshall's only wicket of the innings but you would not have guessed it at the time. Mile race offers cream of Ovett

The organizers offered the day as a prejude to extract. from them in tonight's competition.
Steve Cram and Jarmila Kratoch Steve Cram and Jarmila Kratoch-vilova, both world champions, and Steve Overt and Peter Elliott, both fourth placers in helsinki, come seeking different fortunes in the famous Bislet Stadium. Yet the fortunes, theoretically, do not include money, for this is a B meeting, which does not have a permit to pay participation money.

There is a splendid mile race in prospect between Overt, Sydey Marce and Jose-Luis Gonzalez. Overt has admitted that his world championship 1,500 metre final was the worst race he has ever run. But Maree and Gonzalez did not even Overt, of course, is far from finished, and he sees the Helsinki setback as a good reason for all three setback as a good reason for all three of them to run a fast race.

Overt will certainly get under 3min 50sec, as should Maren and Gonzalez. But Sebastian Coe's world record of 3:47.33 is not an easy one to break. It is intrinsically better than Overt's 1,500 metres world record, and two if not all three of the runners would still have to be in contention in the last 200 metres. n contention in the last 200 metres are is to be a new one.

Miss Krauchvilova may be the best bet for a world record in the 800 metres. Helped by a pacemaker, she could go through 400 metres in close to 55 seconds; she could then be capable of a time around 1:52.5, which would be well inside her which would be well inside her current world record of 1:53.28. With times like those in the offing the only way the British quartet of Shirten Bailey, Anne Purves, Lorraine Baker and Jane Finch could beat her would be to run as a 4 x 200 metres relay squad, and even then you would have to give the Czech an even chance.

Steve Cram and Peter Elliott meet in the 800 metres. There is no one else in the field capable of staying with the two Britons, and the interest will be in just how fast they can run. Coe's world record at this distance, 1:41.73, is far more remote than his mile record. Cram looks cartain to win; if he does, Elliott will be left with further thoughts on how to avoid being caught in the finishing straight.

RACING: DUBAI CONNEXION WITH GOLDEN NEWS FOR BRITISH BLOODSTOCK

The Classic pipeline is opened

Sharcef Dancer, owned by Shalkh Maktoum Al Maktoum, is to be syndicated, probably for a world record price of more than 336m, and will stand at the Dalham Hall with some it the Dalman cases on gride Touching Wood and it. Nephew, the Maktourn bers' other stallions, For the rest brothers' other stallions. For the rest of this year, Shareef Dancer wil race as programmed by Michael Stoute, his trainer. "He will next go far Kepton's September Stakes" as a preliminary for either the Prix de J'Arc de Triomphe or the Champion Stakes. The final decision will depend on the state of the ground", said Stoute westerday.

depend on the state of the ground", said Stoute yesterday.

This is the most important single item of news in the British bloodstock industry for a long time. Northern Dapicer, Shareef Dancer's father, is the most influential stallion since the days of St Simon in the 19th century. This season alone, in Europe offspring of Northern Dancer or of one of his sons. Nijinsky and The Minstrel, have won the English and French Loud Gourness, the French and Irish Derbeys the Eclipse Stakes and the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup, through Shareef Dancer, L'Emigrant, Lomond, Caerleon and Solford.

Hatter of the Machantan Charles which are placed amongst 23 trainers. They also own about 60 broad mares, and over 30 belong to Sballch Mohammed. At the recent kendland July Sale, it was estimated that they purchased 34 yearlings for a total of $41,540,000.

Solford.

Yesterday, shares in Shareef empetition is bound to be intense. as Northern Dancer is now aged 23, and not even such legendary figures and not even such legendary names are immortal.

In his victories in the King Edward VII Stakes at Royal Ascot and in the Irish Sweeps Derby, Shareef Dancer has shown true classic acceleration. At The Current he sprinted easily clear of Caerle and Teenoso, the winners of the French and English Derbeys respectively. His official margin of three lengths over Caerleon was later measured as at least five

The 130 acre Dalham Hall Stud belongs to Shaikh Mohammed and was bought from Major Jim Phillips in October 1981. It is two miles from Newmarket, and the buildings are at present being modernized. Shaikh Mohammed also owns the Aston Upthope Stud in Oxfordshire and the Wood Park Stud in Ireland. Shaikh Maktoum Al Maktoum owns the Gainstorough Stud near Newbury and Shaikh Handan Al Maktoum the Derrinstorough Stud in Ireland.

town Stud in Ireland. It is important to understand the nature of the Maktown brothers relationship. Robert Acton, Shaikh Mohammed's general stud manager put it in a nutshell when he said

As a comparison, the British Bloodstock Agency (England) and the B.B.A. (Irekod), acting on behalf of such buyers as Robert Sangster and Stavros Nisrchos, spent $28,488,000 on the same number of yearings. And James Delahooks, acting for Prince Khaled eight yearlings.

This group of buyers between them spent 51 per cent of the money invested at the world's most significant yearling sale. As hill Oppenheim put it in Racing Update. "If this game were played with Monopoly money, this lot would own half the board."

Dubei is 3,900 square kilometres, and is the second largest country in the United Arab Emirates, after Abu Dabi. It has been the main trading centre of the area for 2,000 years, and judging by their success with trading principally in gold. It is Shareef Dancer and by the way the ruled by the Maktours.

The present head of the family is that the bold Shakh is wrong about Shaikh Rashid Al Maktoum, Maktoum Al Maktoum, the owner Makroum Al Makroum, the owner of Shareef Dancer and also of Touching Wood, the 1982 St Leger winner, is his oldest son. Then comes Hamdan Al Makroum, Shaikh Mobammed is the third in line and is also the Minister of Defence. Shaikh Ahmad, the owner of Wass, is the fourth brother.

These are arrivocratic, proud

These are aristocratic, proud men. The qualities they treasure are honesty and integrity. They have a great regard for the Queen and the test of the British royal family. Shaikh Mohammed appears to be

and whether it might be over-priced.

Shaikh Mohammed is a bearded, athletic figure aged about 35. He is an expert rider, who stood bareback on a horse and camel in turn, as they galloped past the guests at his wedding feast. He flies his own Boeing 727. He is a crack rifle shot and 'likes all forms of hunting. Under pressure, he admits to writing poetry. He is also obvious a private and reserved man, with a keen sense of humour.

Recentity I saw Shaikh Mohammed at Dalham Hall. I was en route to Shaikh Mohammed: poetry, the visionary as well as the action the Suffolk coast on holiday, and got an interview by chance, thanks to their adviser, John Leat I must have cut a ludicrous figure in a shir he straightened his back, raised his and jeans, with two windsurfers head and said: "Who can tell what a strapped on the roof of my Times house is worth?"

Escort. It was funchtime when I Escort. It was hunchtime when I called so I had to wait. I gazed up at the great Cambridge elms, and had some immediate, arrogant and unworthy thoughts. And I was

The Maktoums' heavy involvment in the racing industry must be welcomed for every reason. They are not only continuing to attract the best horses in the world to these islands, but doing something which will also provide jobs in life after racing is falcoury, which he practices in Pakistan and India as well as in Dubai. Two hawks are used, a peregrine, which strikes on sight and another type, which quarters the ground more thoroughly. It appears that the Maktoum brothers are employing both methods of attack as they continue to plunder the riches of the truf.

Record sale at Deauville

Desuville (Reuter) - The Greek shipping millionaire, Stavros Niar-chos, paid a record 4.6m francs for a yearing at the Dearville sales on Sunday night. The yearing, a filly named Actress, was bred by Duc Daudiffiet Pasquier. The previous French record for a yearing was 3.8m francs, fast year, Actress is by Arctic Tern out of lends, whose dam. The prefix "Royal" that graces Windsor races is one that often elicits sureastic remarks from the cognoscenti. With its battered old stands, spartan facilities and almost minivaled poer viewing, one can understand why. However, the cowits who faronged as ever to this popular course yesterday perhaps were the ones really in the know. The class of house may not be anywhere near the best, but Windsor, like the now defunct Alexandra Plane: raceoourse that North London, offers a splendidly "seedy" atmosphere and a cocknail of Runyonesque characters that Ascon might envy.

Today's television and radio programmes Gaynor Fairbrother is an extremely brave young woman and the subject of an engrossing documentary, made over a period of four years, I'M GAYNOR - I'M ME (ITV 10.30 pm). The tragedy of Gaynor began 23 years ago when she was aged eight. Alone in the sitting room of her home she fainted and fell face first into the smouldering ashes on the hear Her pretty looks were totally destroyed and her injuries so severe that it was a miracle that she lived. Twenty years on and countless sidn-graft operations later she still looked like an actress from a Hammer film with her chances of fiving a normal life receding with each day. Then her colleagues at the Shepsted, Leicestershire, packaging factory decided to raise money for Gaynor

The Government may save money by its plans to out the inemployment benefit paid to teembers, but it will also, be buying trouble, the Dally Mirror says. It cannot deplote treasge cannot on the one found and on the other create the one mind and on the times come to combine which inake it more likely, the paper claims. "Most youngstess want to work, whatever critics say, but they don't all have the same copportunities as Mark Thatcher. It is not true that the resent generation of youth is lazy,

The Daily Star reacts to a Liverpool councillor's anany questioning of sex orgics involving children which went on in municipal children's homes by saying 'thank goodness somebody is reacting the right way and asking the right questions. The care of disturbed and delinquent children is a sensitive business. Great skill and responsibility need to be exercised. Onte obviously it is a duty that Liverpool is not properly discharging. The city's judgment has been suspect since the uture-life took council in May If Liverpool cannot put its own house in order, perhaps a government inquiry should do it for them."
